To the FAS community:

I write to you today to announce that a core member of my leadership team, and a long time member of the FAS community, Jocelyn Nakashige, Director of Finance and Administration, will be leaving UCSF after 24 years, for the University of California, Riverside (UCR) as the Senior Associate Dean of Finance and Administration for the UCR School of Medicine. I am heartened to hear that our loss at UCSF is assuredly to be UCR's gain as they build momentum toward fulfilling the University of California's goal to train and expand the primary care physician/scientist base in the inland empire region of California. If they stay on course, the UCR School of Medicine will enter its first medical student class in Fall of 2012, which will make it the first new medical school in the UC system in more than four decades.

Please join me in congratulating Jocelyn on her new appointment. The University of California at Riverside, School of Medicine has made a great decision. The search for Jocelyn's replacement will begin shortly, and I invite each and all of you to encourage qualified candidates to apply during the posting period.

Sincerely,

John Plotts
